SCENES AT THE SOUP KITCHENS.

An Anonymous Gift of $500 by a Young Lady.

The literature of charity has its eloquent chareteristics, and they are somewhat marked in the narratives and communications given below. To give, and to give generously, wisely and promptly, has come to be the daily habit of a large number of our citizens. The need for this kindliness of heart, and this broad generosity is made more and more apparent as the districts in which the poor reside are more carefully visited by volunteer vintors, who are moved to this ministration of mercy by "that touch of nature that makes the whole world 'kin."

THE SOUP KITCHENS.

Yesterday 3,650 persons, by actual count, were supplied with good, wholesome and sustaining sup at the eight different soup kitchens estabd under the direction of Mr. L. Delmonico. Four new soup kitchens were organized yesterday, opening at ten o'clock. The poor people of the Twentieth ward, colored and white, had as much soup as they could drink. The best organized en is in the Sixth ward, where 240 gallons of sonn were delivered from ten o'clock in the mornkitchen the system is perfect, under the supervision of Mr. Morgan Jones and Captain Kennedy, of the Sixth precinct police. An officer is detailed, Prank Caddell, who investigates every case and who will not allow impostors to obtain the soup. To-morrow Mr. Ranhoffer will apply to Mr. Delmonico for another olier of 120 gallons to supply the poor of the Sixth ward. In the Twentieth ward there was a soup house established in Thirtieth street, next door to the police station. The soup house was in a basement and it was intended for colored people. The from the best beef and lentils. Lentils are very small peas of a coffee color. In stables of the mounted squad, in Thirty-first street, there was a 120 galion kettle of boiling soup at ten o'clock yesterday morning. The Eighteenth ward kitchen, in evenue A, near Nineteenth street, was frequented yesterday by nearly 300 persons, a great number of whom were Germans. The soup kitchen at No. 114 Wooster street was crowded late in the day. A number of colored people called and carried out soup to their families. At the East Broadway soup house, near Market street, the soup kettle was exhausted at an early hour, just after noon. This is a thickly populated district, and it will be necessary to have another 120 gailon boiler immediately, which will be furnished by Mr. Ranhoffer. The chef will furnish a mutton and barley broth to all who may call on Sunday at the different soup kitchens which are now established in the Sixth. Seventh, Eleventh, Fourteenth, Eighteenth and Twentieth wards (two soup houses in this ward). Every day a different soup will be furnished to the poor people, The colored people of the Twentieth ward will have a good soup of the best beef material given them—no difference being made where sex, age or color is concerned.

Lymay be necessary that captains of police. whom were Germans. The soup kitchen at No. 114 will have a good sond of the best beef material given them—no difference being made where sex, age or color is concerned.

It may be necessary that captains of police who are not pressed heavily by police business should sak patrolmen who are on their respective beats to inform the respectable poor that relief is near; that good soup is at hand, and that no hungry, weak and famished man, out of work and without a penny in his pocket, or a delicate wife, or a puny and struggling child. used to the streets, can be deprived of nourishment. Good warm soup will be furnished to all who may ask it at the soup kitchens.

PICTURES OF POVERTY.

The Bell of St. John's-A Morning Among the Very Poor-Shylock at the Bed of a Woman in Childbirth-The Fifth Avenue of the Depths.

The spire of St. John's is surmounted by a vane that throws upon the street in front in the early in the beliry rang out the hour of eight vesterday there came thronging across this shadow half-clad figures of men, women and children, who seemed ake those ghostly visitants

Of seen in sepulchres and charnel vaults, Lingering and sitting by a new-made grave.

At each clang of the sonorous beil new figures came forth from the intersecting streets adjacent and mingled in the shadow. When the last peal had gone forth from this brazen tongue, speaking to the poor, the iron gates swung mward upon their hinges and a motiey gathering began to pour through the courtyard and into the vestibule of the Guild building. The writer was thinking long after of this magic of the bell, when he heard a warning sound and it began its clamor again, erving out to the people of the neighborhood the our of ten. A little while later and the rattle of an approaching carriage was heard, and from that time till four in the afternoon there came an endless procession of coupés, landaus and clarences, to the doors. Hundreds of ladies representing the highest circles of culture, refinement and wealth. entered and soon began to busy themselves in aid of the unfortunates around them. Some came to offer their services as visitors, and not a lew brought with them lists of those they had already called upon and to whom they had rendered temporary assistance. In the clothing bureau there was a dearth of supplies, as over $2,000 garments called upon and to whom they had rendered temporary assistance. In the clothing bureau there was a dearth of supplies, as over $2,000 garments have been furnished to the unclad during the past week, and unless liberal supplies are soon received but lew more can be clothed.

SHYLOCK AT THE SICK ERD.

In Hudson street there was accidentally discovered a case of extreme destitution that had been hidden from the earlier visitors. A young man, of good education and ousiness habits, had been discharged from employment during the panic and was inving here in poor rooms with his wife and one child. This young man, though gaily in close contact with and well known to the members of the Guild, which he had assisted in the days of his prosperity, failed, from a false pride, to let his distress be known. The wife was lately condued, and for days before her bady was born and for several days since the landlord has kept her in a constant state of terror, from his semi-daily demands for rent and his threats to "throw them all out upon the street without more add." The rent has been paid, and the poor woman and her new-born infant have at least food and shelter for the present. Thanks to the brave lady visitors of the Guild and the generous hearts of New York.

THE LOWES PIPTH AVENUE.

South Fifth avenue is the shadow of the Fifth avenue of the rich. Rags here take the piace of newers in the doorysrd, and plate glass windows are supplanted by broken panes in a dingy sush, and by wisps of straw and bundles of rags thrust into the apertures that admit more cold than hight. In a rear building at No. 69—a building approached by a narrow passageway reeking with filth—lives an aged pair. Their home is a den in a divty celiar, and you have to bend low as you cross the threshold to enter. Once in this place you first and only anxiety is to get out again, and even the black and fearful court you have to cross, and the foul alley through the winding way of which you must pass, seem inviting when you have for a moment breathed the deadly

Mr. James L. Armstrong, of No. 372 Fifth avenue, yesterday forwarded a check for $50 to the family of the composer. Other sums are required by the committee to remove the family from their indebtedness, and they will doubtless be received. Efforts are also being made to secure for the father a musical professorship in some of our institutions, a position for which he is eminority

THE CHARITY EXHIBIT.

The Dispensers of Charity Who Fear Let Their Lights Shine-Some Start-ling Facts for Those Who Have Money to Disburse Through Charitable Societies—A Mathematician Points a Moral Between Catholic and Protestant Charities.

The effort of the HERALD to give a faithful picture of the noble work of the charitable matitutions of the city by publishing a synopsis of the receipts, expenditures and salaries of all, so as to clearly exhibit to the most simple minded the figures, has created a furor that has driven many officers of charitable institutions (which will not bear investigation) into silence and called out let, asking for a still further ventilation of the in-stitutions, with a view of making the dis-honest honest and the reckless economical. The Bureau of Charities has met with the same difficulty that the HERALD does to secure complete returns; but investigations made by a representative of the HERALD yesterday, at the Bureau of Charities and other institutions, show that the alphabetical list of the HERALD is the only complete directory of the charitable and benevolent societies of the city. On that list there are nearly 300 institutions which have been asked for information, and the responses will be seen in the statements given below.

Every intelligent reader of the "charity exhibit" can draw his own conclusions from the above, comparisons are permitted, and hence space is given to a correspondent below. Comparative Cost of Charities-A Proper Time for Investigation.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD: The interesting official statements which you have thus far published show that the amount annually expended for relief by some eighty char-ities in New York is about $1,750,000. As some of the official reports are not as clear as they should be, the exact amount cannot be ascertained. According to the same statements, the cost of administering the foregoing sum is about $210,000.

the numerous non-Catbolic charities produces a result that is not creditable to the latter. The Roman Catholics expend under $24,000 in administering about $500,000; ax the other charities expend about $186,000 in administering $950,000. Evidently your suggestion for an investigation of the management of some of our charitable institutions, so-called, is timely and pertinent. It is very plain that "sometiming is rotten in the state of Denmark," and the present appears to be a very proper time to discover what and where the trouble is, even though Mr. Barnard and Mr. Brace think otherwise.

An Explanation of a Charity.

NEW YORK, Feb. 20, 1874.
TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD: ment, unier "Charities," that the Industrial School, located corner of Thirty-sixth street and Ninth avenue, expended $3,800 for expenses and nothing for relief. As our school is the only one I know of on Thirty-sixth street and Ninth avenue I would have to state that the expenses of the mission, except the pastor's salary, are about $3,000, and, besides that, there is being distributed to needs persons in the neighborhood over $700, and for cloth, &c., for the Saturday morning sewing school $100, which does not cost one cent for distribution, as a volunteer committee of ladies and gentlemen attend to the distribution of all moneys awarded to us from the church to which our mission belongs. Yours truty,

A MODEST LADY'S CHARITY.

Yestorday afternoon a young and modestly dressed lady, giving no name, appeared in the reception room of the Herald office among the throng calling on business and in search of relief in this time of unexampled distress. When saked if it required a special answer ane replied it did not; she "only wished to be sure it came to the right hands." Saying this she turned and descended the winding stairs. The object of her visit became known when the note she brought being opened was found to contain a check on the Second National Bank for $500.
